Overall, poverty rates did not vary much between 1990 and 2000. Between 2000 and 2010, poverty rates dramatically increased in every county. The majority of the growth occurred after 2007.

Poverty rates doubled, or nearly doubled, in suburban counties Johnson, Clay and Platte. By 2010, 1 in 3 area poor lived in the suburbs. Urban counties – Wyandotte and Jackson – continued to have the greatest percentage of their populations living in poverty.

Poverty by Age: Children, youth and young adults have the area's highest poverty rates.

Children, youth and young adults continue to be the area's poorest residents. For those under age 25, nearly 1 in 5 is poor. For those over 25, 1 in 10 is poor.

Between 2000 and 2010, every age group under age 35 experienced a 5 percentage point or greater increase in poverty rate. Ages 35-44 and 45-54 had a 4 percentage point increase. For those ages 55 and above, the poverty rate was stable, with a slight decline for the oldest age group (age 75 and above). In general, poverty rates by age follow this similar trend in every county.

Individuals and Families: More than 40,000 families, most with children, lived in poverty.

Of the 225,000 poor in the 6-county area, nearly 60,000 lived in non-family households. Slightly more than one-half of those living in non-family households lived alone. Individuals living in non-family households had a poverty rate of nearly 20%. Three in 4 of the area poor lived in family households – two or more people related by birth, marriage adoption.

Low Income: More than 500,000 people lived at incomes twice the federal poverty level or below in 2010.

Nearly 3 in 10 area residents lived in economic hardship (low income) in 2010. Living with income that is below twice the federal poverty threshold is a measure of not having adequate income for basic needs such as housing, childcare, transportation, health care and food. The 2010 rate of 28.8% was up from 22.1% in 2000.

At the 200% of poverty threshold, the 2010 count was 510,000 people compared to 350,000 in 2000. This represents 160,000 more people, a 46% increase. During this same period the area's population grew by only 12%.

Geographic Differences

County-by-county poverty levels ranged from a high of 24.3% in Wyandotte County to a low of 6.6% in Johnson County. Poverty rates for the other counties were: Cass, 7.9%, Clay, 10.1%, Jackson 17.1% and Platte, 8.1%.

While poverty levels in the urban counties are higher, suburban poverty experienced the highest rate of growth, more than doubling the number of poor living in the suburbs during the decade. The most rapid growth occurred between 2007 and 2010. Between 2007 and 2010, the number of poor increased by more than 25,000 in the suburbs, compared to 21,000 in the urban counties. At the beginning of the decade 1 out of 4 of the area's poor lived in a suburban county, by 2010 it was 1 in 3.

Concentration of poverty is greatest in the urban counties. Urban counties experienced the largest increase in poverty rates between 2000 and 2010. Wyandotte County's poverty rate went up nearly 8 percentage points and Jackson County's up 5 percentage points.

Children and youth are the poorest residents of every county. In the urban counties of Wyandotte and Jackson, the number is more than 1 in 3 and 1 in 4, respectively.
